CENTRAL COAL ASSOCIATION PROTESTS AGAINST REVIVAL OF JOINT MEETINGS IN LETTER TO SECRETARY J. J. DAVIS

President Shillingford Says Operators Are Ready And Willing To Meet Their Employees, But See No Occasion For Interference From The Government At This Time.

TEXT OF LETTER TO SECRETARY DAVIS

Altoona, Pa., March 11.—Protest against the revival of joint conferences between miners and operators today was sent to Secretary of Labor Davis by G. Webb Shillingford, President of the Central Coal Association. Mr. Shillingford said the joint conference set up a monopoly of union labor and that to submit to wage scales and rules interfered with efficiency, resulting in inflated costs and unreliability of production. He said the association members are ready to meet their employees, whether union or non-union, to discuss a new scale, and asked the Federal authorities not to complicate the situation.

Clearfield, Pa., March 11, 1922.—Mr. G. Webb Shillingford, President of the Central Coal Association, Altoona, Pa., today forwarded the following communication to Hon. James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, protesting against the efforts to rehabilitate the Central Competitive Field Joint conference:

Hon. James J. Davis,
Secretary of Labor,
Washington, D. C.
My dear Mr. Secretary:

The Executive Committee of the Central Coal Association of Central Pennsylvania composed of operators owning mines of 16,000,000 tons annual capacity, representing $40,000,000 investment, normally employing 15,000 men, most respectfully but earnestly protest against the administration's efforts as reported in the press to secure the participation of the operators of Western Pennsylvania and Ohio in the Central Competitive Field Wage conference.

These conferences in the past have been the means of setting up monopoly of union labor in those states, resulting in a domination that has forced all outlying districts producing in the aggregate more coal than the Central Competitive Field to submit to wage scales and rules that interfere with efficiency, regardless of local conditions, resulting in inflated costs; unreliability of service to consumers and localities dependent upon union mines and compelling the operators to collect union dues. These leaders now wishing to secure the administration's influence toward continuing the Central Competitive Field conferences still persist in an attempt to set up a super-government by securing control of the coal industry. They are not only endeavoring to maintain a war scale of wages, but demand a reduction in the hours of labor and number of days work, which will increase the cost of coal to an absurd figure. They willfully ignore all economic laws and competitive conditions.

Central Pennsylvania is one of the largest coal fields shipping to the eastern markets. It has produced as much as 62,000,000 tons in 1918, which is considerably in excess of ten per cent of the total production of the United States in that year. There are about 69,000 men employed in the district, of which about 43,000 are members of the Union. The operators of this district have neither voice nor vote in the negotiation of the Central Competitive Field wage agreement and in the past have been compelled to accept the conclusions of that joint conference.

All of the great fields in the east and competitive with our district are now non-union. These fields include Pocahontas, New River, Tug River and Upper Potomac fields of West Virginia; Maryland; Somerset county, Westmoreland county and Fayette County of Pennsylvania. The wage scales in these fields are much less than those in effect in this district, having been readjusted to meet living costs and present economic conditions in the natural markets of the eastern coal fields; hence their cost of production is much below the cost of production in Central Pennsylvania.

The wage scales in Central Pennsylvania must necessarily be based upon the conditions in the territory just named and not upon the conditions in the Central Competitive Field. The elimination of the Central Competitive Field as the basis point for the industry is essential to the prosperity of the outlying districts and is particularly necessary to the future prosperity of Central Pennsylvania.

The present policy of the United Mine Workers of America prohibits any agreement being reached in the outlying districts until an agreement has been consummated in the Central Competitive Field. This means that the miners of Central Pennsylvania will be ordered to suspend work on April 1st without having had the authority to negotiate a new wage scale.

In 1919, although the war was over the union operators of the country were forced into arbitration and a contract that has resulted in complete demoralization of the trade and business formerly enjoyed by union operators and their employees. At the present time the public is demanding efficiency, reasonable prices and a dependable supply of coal. The country is now getting a large percentage of its needs from non-union fields where men are being paid from 60 to 80 per cent higher than pre-war wages. This tonnage can be materially increased and will be after April 1st, with the result that union miners and miners will suffer from a loss of established trade for years to come.

The Central Coal Association has repeatedly requested the officials of the United Mine Workers of America of this district to meet them and discuss a revision of wages to meet economic conditions, but in each instance this request has been refused, such refusal having been directed by the national president of the United Mine Workers of America. However, the members of the Central Coal Association stand ready to meet the representatives of their employees, whether union or non-union, in order to negotiate a new schedule of wages and rules to take the place of the one expiring on March 31, 1922.

We respectfully urge the administration to carefully consider in its very proper attempt to avoid a strike that it does not further complicate the situation and handicap the efforts of responsible operators who are endeavoring to get themselves in a position where they can treat with their employees in fairness and serve the public properly.

Very truly yours,

G. WEBB SHILLINGFORD

President

UNDERWOOD TELLS SENATE DEFEAT OF TREATY WOULD BE A BACKWARD STEP

Washington, D. C., March 11.—Defeat of the Four Power Pacific Treaty would be a backward step in the life of this Nation, Senator Underwood of Alabama, said in a speech today. Senator Underwood is the Democratic leader in the Senate and was one of the American delegates to the Arms Conference. His speech was intended to enlist the support of the Democrats for the Treaty. If the senate ratifies the Treaty, Underwood said, I am satisfied that there will disappear not only real cause for war but there will not naturally exist the opportunity for war that has threatened us during the last two decades.

GERMANY TAKING JAPAN'S TRADE IN FAR EAST

By Clarence Dabose
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Tokyo (by mail to United Press).—Germany has made a strong showing in the first skirmishes of her new war with Japan in the Far East—a commercial war for foreign trade.

German beer and German concrete are underselling Japanese products in most of the South Sea Islands, according to reports here.

Germany has not been back in these markets very long and her competition does not yet include her pre-war range of products. The South Seas beer and concrete markets are not of themselves of tremendous importance. But trade authorities here attach much significance to German ability at this time to put these supplies into Japanese trade territory at prices said to be below Japanese cost of production.

"If Germany can do this now, she can win much bigger trade battles out here before long," they say.

Japanese business men continue to be distressed and alarmed over their foreign trade situation. Imports continue to increase and exports to decrease, thus making greater Japan's unfavorable trade balance.

A small item in the total, but one particularly galling from the Japanese trade standpoint, is that Chinese paper umbrellas and Chinese matches are being imported into Japan in greatly increased quantities. Japan had formerly exported large quantities of these articles to China, and had imported negligible quantities of them from China. A recent report said that about 32,000 Chinese paper umbrellas per month are now being sent to Japan, whereas a few years ago the average was about 250 per month.

"Japanese prices must be reduced, or Japan will lose much more of her foreign trade," is the burden of numerous warnings sounded here by bankers and trade authorities.

R. Ichinomiya, formerly New York manager of the Yokohama Specie Bank said that "Japanese prices, that are now the highest in the world must be reduced."

"If Japan could absorb all her surplus goods," he said, "high prices here might be endured. But when her manufacturers depend on selling the goods in world markets lower prices must be exacted. Competing countries have lower prices in the battle for the world trade, and Japanese manufacturers are handicapped by high price quotations when they enter competition."

A very serious industrial crisis confronts Japan, according to the declaration of Baron Sakatani, former Minister of Finance. The increasingly unfavorable balance of trade and labor unrest in Japan are alarming, he declared.

MINERS' CONVENTION WILL NOT REACH THE SCALE THIS WEEK

DuBois, Pa., March 11.—This morning's session of the miners' convention was taken up with discussion of the resolution which had to do with a change in the situation to provide aid for a man who had been out of employment for two months. At the end of the arguments a resolution was presented to levy an assessment of fifty cents each pay day, or one dollar a month, for a defense fund. This was later amended to make it read twenty-five cents with an additional twenty-five cents on the check-off, but the whole matter was thrown out when the constitution committee asked to have it re-committed to the committee with a promise to cover the whole matter later. Secretary Gilbert and Vice President Martin talked on the depleted condition of the funds and the "penny wise, pound foolish" policy. It was also stated that those who had work during 1922 had earned an average wage of $64.00 a month. Nothing has been said all week in regard to the scale. The scale committee is selected and organized and it is understood they are ready to report whenever the convention gets to the point where it is ready to hear them. On Monday the convention will take up the constitution committee's report and dispose of it before taking up anything else.

New York, N. Y., March 11.—Further evidence of the New York stock market's remarkable vitality was furnished during today's dabbawate session. Special strength was displayed by low priced industrials. Lee Tire & Rubber, United States Cast Iron Pipe and Coshen Oil were among these. During the last hour the market showed a strong upward tendency.

Housemaid Disclosed As Successful Author In Probating Of Estate

Oconomowoc, Wis., March 11. (United Press).—The voice from an unknown grave echoed here recently through the unpoetic environment of a court procedure to place the crown of successful authorship upon a Wisconsin woman, who during her life had been seemingly nothing more than a competent housemaid and housewife.

There is surprise among the residents of this little city where Amelia Swanson energetically dusted, scrubbed and baked, at first for others and later in her own neat little home as the wife of Jim Baker, Summit, Wisconsin. She died in the Waukesha Insane Asylum, May 3, 1921.

For although the book written by Mrs. Baker under the name of Emily Swenson was published and created a literary furore in 1908, it was only through probate proceedings that the author was identified. The book is "A Modern Valkyrie," a book which even today would seem "advanced" and which when published was considered ultra radical.

Since that time more than $9,000 in securities have been unearthed, showing that Mrs. Baker possessed a bit of financial wisdom. A collection of beautiful old silver and personal jewelry was also found. This would indicate that the book, which deals with servant and sex problems, must have brought some money.

Judge A. G. Dorse, administrator has pieced together the unusual life of a foreign born woman serving in a menial capacity and who yet was able to write an unusual book in the English tongue. Amelia Swanson came here in early 1900 with the family of C. M. Quincey, wealthy New Yorkers. Judge Dorse said the first recollection he had of her was in 1913, when he started practicing law and she came to him and asked him to type write some manuscript for her.

Mrs. Baker, according to Judge Dorse, was one of the pioneers in advocating equal rights for women. Although a vehement attitude toward undesirable men is voiced in the book it is certain that Mrs. Baker was happy in her married life, for she tenderly nursed her husband during several trying years of cancer before

It is very fashionable to have the measles in the house these days, at least one would think so in taking a walk about town, and Health Officer Gaulin says he can hardly supply the demand for the cute little yellow cards that he carries under his tack hammer arm. JOHN S. FISHER ANNOUNCES THAT HE WILL ENTER PRIMARY AS A CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR AND STATES PLATFORM

Is First Candidate For Highest Office In The State To Formulate A Platform Which Covers
Major Items Of Interest—Makes Speech At His Home In Indiana.

FOR BUDGET SYSTEM OF STATE FINANCE

John S. Fisher, Banking Commissioner of Pennsylvania, and neighbor to Clearfield County, today formally announced that he will enter the primaries on May 16th, for the nomination for Governor. Mr. Fisher made this statement, covering the questions of interest in the campaign, at his home at Indiana early this afternoon.

My Fellow Citizens, Neighbors and Friends:—

When you met together in my absence a few days ago and called on me to be a candidate at the coming primaries for the Republican nomination for the exalted office of Governor, you at once conferred on me a high mark of favor and distinction and brought me face to face with the most serious problem I have had to confront in a somewhat active public career. I cannot persuade myself that I am deserving of all the fine things you said of me, but, coming from those in all walks with whom I have spent my entire life and among whom it is my fondest expectation to dwell the remainder of my allotted days, your tribute to my humble virtues and qualifications and your enthusiastic call to enter a contest which presents so wide and attractive field for service have given me a sense of pleasure beyond the power of words to express or of any mere office to bestow.

I cannot conceive that anyone with a comprehension of the complex problems of the State government can enter lightly upon a campaign to be the chief executive of the Commonwealth. The Governor is charged with great responsibilities. It is his duty to enforce the law, to maintain peace and good order, to protect the citizens in the safety of their property, and energetically, faithfully and honestly to administer all the numerous functions of government having to do with the happiness, welfare and development of our great population in all its varied activities. Moreover, the Governor has a large measure of responsibility in legislation. He is not only vested with the powers of veto, but in the evolution of our practical system of law enactment, has come to be regarded mainly as the sponsor of the legislative program for the sessions convening during his incumbency in office. In all matters pertaining to the raising of revenue and the appropriation of public moneys and the management, creation and expansion of the departments of government to meet every varying needs and demands, the Legislature must, almost of necessity, look to the Chief Executive for suggestion and guidance.

While I have been greatly impressed and flattered with the wholeheartedness and earnestness of your call to enter the list of candidates, I have felt it my duty carefully to weigh the situation and measure my own abilities against the demands of so great an office before reaching a decision. In the meantime influential citizens and friends in neighboring counties have volunteered to hold meetings and have done me the great honor to pass complimentary resolutions; in the course of which they have added their voice to yours in the call for me to stand as a candidate. I would be unworthy of these manifestations of favor if I did not feel myself stirred with a resolve to vigorous action.

In response, therefore, to the calls which have come to me from you and many other friends and fellow citizens and in conformity with what I regard as a laudable ambition to serve my State, I declare my intention to become a candidate for the Republican nomination for the office of Governor at the primaries to be held on May 16, 1922. I submit my name to the considerate judgment of the great body of Republican voters of the State with the full knowledge that they must be the judges of my qualifications, that, they must pass upon my record in public and private life and that they in a spirit of equity must determine the fairness of the claims of Western Pennsylvania for recognition at this time. In making this decision it is only fitting that I should briefly outline my views on questions of public interest, with which the next administration will, in all probability, be called on to deal.

Of immediate and pressing importance is the reform of the fiscal system of the State. It is admitted on all hands that our accounts are out of balance. Prompt steps must be taken to cure this condition and the financial operations of the State must be placed under a system of budgeting which will prevent a recurrence of the embarrassment from which the treasury is now suffering. Much can be done to systematize the financial operations of the State government through the co-operation of the executive and legislative branches with the Auditor-General and the State Treasurer, but it can hardly be expected that with the introduction of so many different authorities into a problem so vital and complex that there will be that constancy of action and policy which is absolutely essential to success. It is imperative, that the State be provided with a scientific plan for the conduct of its vast business operations, in which the responsibility may be focused upon some authority that may be accountable for results. This can be accomplished only by the amendment of our fundamental law. I therefore most emphatically favor the introduction of a budget system into the Constitution at as early a date as the subject can be brought before the people of the State for their consideration.

We are now passing through a period of reaction from the high prices and inflations of a war conditions. The average citizen is confronted with falling prices and diminishing profits. He is feeling keenly the burdens of high taxes which are a necessary aftermath of the war. Under these conditions I favor a policy of strict economy and retrenchment. I am opposed to all unnecessary and wasteful expenditures of public money. The operations of the departments of government must be kept within available revenues. Where necessary, deficits incurred should be paid. Except in cases of extreme emergency which are clearly defined and limited in the Constitution, deficits by departments of government are in violation of the spirit and letter of the Constitution. In the interest of good business and for the protection of the State there must be no more deficits.

I believe in the enforcement of law and the maintenance of order. Crimes of all kinds is too prevalent. We have been diligent to make laws. There now seems to prevail a disposition to

Stellar Attraction Will Appear At Auditorium Here On Monday Night

The High School Activity Board deserve a great deal of credit for bringing entertainments to Clearfield of the calibre of the Oceanic Ladies Quintet which will appear here on Monday evening at the High School Auditorium. Many people seem to be under the impression that this concert is for only those who have season tickets to the whole entertainment course but this is wrong. Single admissions are sold at a very reasonable and popular price as shown in the advertisement. The program for Monday evening will be unusually entertaining and every Clearfielder who loves clean entertainment of an enjoyable and instructive character should attend.

This is an orchestra with a history. For three years following its organization this company was a standard attraction in Lyceum and Chautauqua. Then came a year devoted to the entertaining of our soldiers in France and England. For the past two years the Quintet has again toured in Lyceum and Chautauqua in America, resuming this work within fifteen days after sailing from France.

The members of the orchestra were honored by being chosen from more than fifty organizations to represent American lady musicians in a concert trip to the Antilles, giving more than seventy concerts in New Zealand.

Three of the original members are still with the Quintet having played together for six years. The other two members have been with the organization for two years.

The Quintet is contemplating a trip to the Orient under the auspices of a number of Japanese business men who are anxious to present to Japanese music lovers a specimen of the best in American lady musical organizations.

Not the least of the Quintet features are the singing and musical romances. Three of the young ladies are exceptional singers, and Miss Truitt, flute and trans. is a reader of more than usual ability.

Versatility generally presupposes mediocrity in at least one direction but these young ladies are artists in each of their several lines. Miss Ferguson is a wonderful cornetist, but could major in voice; Miss Gernand, one of America's best lady cellists, is a professional pianist and soprano; Miss Carstensen, the violinist and leader, is equally good on the saxophone, and Miss Liddy, the vocal soloist, is also the pianist.

The program is a treat for music lovers and will appeal to all classes. The voyages of this orchestra across the broad Atlantic and Pacific have entitled it to the fitting name of The Oceanic Ladies Quintet.

Mr. Paul A. Zetler of the High School Faculty is suffering from a bad cold but has stuck to his work despite his indisposition.

Did you hear the good news? At the last meeting of the Board of Education it was practically decided that some means would be devised by which Curwensville would obtain a new High School Building in the near future. Until this can be accomplished, some other building in town will be procured for five additional rooms. Every patron of the schools realize their crowded condition, and the fact that each year the class coming into the High School, which is already crowded, far exceeds the class which is graduated, brings home to us the necessity for making better provision for the education of our youth.

We were informed today of the death of Mrs Leidy, widow of Rev Geo Leidy, twice a pastor of the M E church. His first pastorate was about the year 1897. Then again in 1913 he supplied the work previous to Mr Lantz's being appointed. Her death was due to diphtheria. She was buried in Tyrone, Thursday afternoon from the home of her step-daughter, Mrs Madge Leidy Beyers, wife of Mr Sam'l Beyers.

Mr Geo Irvin is visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs Millon on Ridge Avenue.

Raymond Maurey spent part of Friday in Clearfield.

Mr and Mrs C A Rorabaugh are both ill at their home on State street.

Miss Gertrude Powell visited her daughter Miss Julia, who is a surgical patient in Clearfield Hospital, yesterday afternoon. Miss Powell is recovering from her operation.

Mrs Mame Hartzfeld of Clearfield, was a recent visitor with her sister Mrs Frank Weber of East Vu.

Miss Evon Smeal has returned to her home in Juniata after a pleasant visit with her grandparents Mr and Mrs C W Miller on South Side.

Haven Baer, who has been a patient in Clearfield Hospital for the past two weeks, suffering from brain fever, has so far recovered as to be brought to his home on South Liberty street, but is still confined to his bed.

Hard Telling.
The new servant was as truthful as she could be. The first caller asked to see her mistress "She's not at home," was the answer. "When will she be back?" asked the caller. "I don't know," said the caller. "I don't know," said the caller. "I don't know," said the caller.

Mrs Mike Condon of Surveyor Run, is visiting at the home of Joe Condon on Old Mill Road.

James and William Carns drove out to Stone Run Hunting Camp and spent several days this week. "Bill" says he had to stone five deer out of the road so the horses could go by. Of course we know this sounds kind of "doubtful" but it may be true. Nevertheless Bill says he has his watching place picked out for Dec 1 1922, and it won't be stones he will use to scare them away.

W A Collins is busy planting all kinds of seeds for his spring and summer supply. He now has for sale all kinds of potted plants, the most beautiful carnations one can find sweet peas and the finest lettuce in the country.

Miss A I Nelson and children have all been very sick.

Announcing New Models, New Plans New Policies

We are now offering to the motoring public of this community the widely popular line of automobiles manufactured by the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company.

The Paige franchise has come to us at a peculiarly propitious time, for by virtue of attested performances Paige has won its place as the undisputed leader of all American sporting cars.

The Paige Daytona "6-66" Model has established new world's Speedway stock chassis records from 5 to 100 miles. Such consistently brilliant performance is unique in the history of Motordom. It demonstrates more than speed—it is indisputable proof of stamina and endurance, those qualities necessary for a sound investment.

So, too, have the Paige models built on the smaller or New Series "6-44" chassis revealed their surpassing merits. These cars in the hands of any driver mount from 5 to 25 miles in 9 seconds, proving that here too, Paige engineers have attained remarkable standards of engine efficiency.

Paige cars, both "6-66" and "6-44" models, are strictly new cars, from stem to stern, and belong to the current hour. Priced on the basis of the prevailing costs of the readjusted materials market, they are beyond the shadow of a doubt the greatest dollar-for-dollar value before the public today.

Such is the line we now represent—a line we can recommend with whole-hearted enthusiasm.

And with this line we ally our own policy of Service and Satisfaction to the owner.

We cordially invite you to visit our show-rooms. You will find it profitable to inspect the new Paige line.

We have just one suggestion. A cursory examination will reveal the proverbial Paige beauty. Only a demonstration will give you an adequate idea of what Paige engineers have actually accomplished.

Let us book you, therefore, for a ride in either the "6-66" or the new series "6-44."

All comparisons and conclusions we leave to your own good judgment.

EXCERPTS FROM THE SPEECH OF CANDIDATE JOHN S. FISHER

I regard the public school system as the most vital function of the State. It molds the citizenship of the future. In large measure the school is the State. Every provision, therefore, consistent with the financial ability of the Commonwealth, should be made to provide a comprehensive plan of education with adequate accommodations, modern equipment and teaching ability of the highest order. We are yearly spending a princely sum on the schools, perhaps $90,000,000 from State and local sources, and the people are justified in expecting commensurate results.

The program for the construction of a State highway system, so auspiciously begun and so far advanced, should be carried to a conclusion as rapidly as circumstances will permit. We have every reason to believe that, due to lower costs of construction, we will in the future be able to get much greater mileage for less money than we have in the past few years. As rapidly as funds become available this great undertaking, so essential to the prosperity and welfare of all, and especially to our farming sections, should be pushed forward. It is of the highest importance that all sections of the State be connected with hard roads, open all the year around.

Of scarcely less importance than good roads to the physical well being of the people is the reforestation of our denuded land areas. This work has made splendid progress since the organization of the Forestry Department, but present accomplishments constitute only a fractional part of what remains to be done. Any investment in this enterprise will yield a rich return in benefits of many kinds and later be a source of great profit which will help to carry the burden of our common school system.

Our banking laws are in process of codification and revision by a commission especially created for that purpose. This commission is drawing its arduous labors to a conclusion and will submit to the next session of the Legislature suggestions for a comprehensive and modern banking code. Recent occurrences have made it desirable that the supervision of the Banking Department be extended to individuals and firms dealing in investment securities. Numerous failures and enormous losses have aroused public opinion on the subject. Believe that the practical solution may be found by requiring dealers in such securities to be licensed by the State, under proper safeguards for the protection of the investing public, and by subjecting their business to inspection and investigation as in the case of ordinary banks and trust companies.

There has lately been created a Department of Public Welfare. This is not a new activity of the State, but rather a re-organization of the old Board of Public Charities, with increased jurisdiction and amplified powers. The purposes of the department is to administer, in a more systematic and business-like manner, the charitable and penal institutions of the State. It operates in a humanitarian field which enlists our tenderest sympathies and noblest impulses. The department should be fully organized and supported in order to carry on the beneficent purpose for which it is created.

I am fully convinced that a greater degree of self-government should be permitted to cities and other municipalities. Due to industrial developments and economic changes there has been a rapid tendency in the last few years for our population to concentrate in towns and cities. This condition has produced a great variety of municipal problems and a mass of new legislation, more or less of an experimental character. I have reached the definite conclusion that there are many local matters affecting the political, social, physical and moral well being of communities which may wisely be left by the State to the people who are immediately concerned. I would not favor a degree of independence which would result in confusion, but there should be permitted the largest possible opportunity for the development of all kinds of worthy communal activities.

There should be the highest degree of co-ordination and co-operation between the various departments of government. Complaints have been made and given wide circulation that there are overlappings and duplications of authority and that there are useless and unnecessary employees on the pay roll of the State. The Commission for the re-organization of the State Government, created by the Legislature of 1921, is now engaged in making a comprehensive study of our complicated form of government with a view of simplifying the same and eliminating the waste arising from unnecessary functions and employees. I shall favor the enactment of such legislation as will produce the largest measure of economy consistent with the efficient operation of all departments of government.

We cannot overlook industrial conditions. Business has fallen into the trough of depression. Industries are closed or on part time and the workers are suffering for want of employment. Every energy within the power of the State should be exerted to the utmost to bring about a restoration of normal business conditions, to the end that labor may be profitably employed and business rewarded with a reasonable return. There are more than one million six hundred thousand of our people employed in industrial pursuits. Our prosperity is dependent upon their earning power. It has been the peculiar concern of our State to provide adequate laws for the regulation of labor conditions and for the care of those who suffer from accident and death while in the pursuit of their employment, as well as for their wives and children and immediate dependents. I am in favor of the effective and just administration of all those humanitarian laws which have been enacted for the protection, safety and support of that great and useful body of our population who find employment in the industries.

Just at present our farmers are feeling the pinch of business depression more keenly than any other class. The price of staple agricultural products has dropped below cost of production, while the prices of implements, fertilizers, seeds and other articles essential to farming have fallen but slightly. This inequality is calculated to produce disastrous results. Unless the farmers are given better prices for their products or are enabled to supply their necessities at much lower costs, there is going to be a dearth in the production of articles of food. We cannot be unjust to that great body of industrious citizens who till our farms without jeopardizing the bread supply. A complete remedy perhaps does not lie within the powers of the State, but every endeavor should be put forth to restore the economic balance which will put agriculture on a parity with other lines of business and industry. Our Agricultural Department should be enabled increasingly to serve the needs of the farmers by supplying them with up-to-date information and giving them access to every scientific aid through research and experimentation to assist them in producing better results in crops and herds. The Agricultural Department, in addition to aiding in production, should give every possible assistance to the farmers in their efforts to secure more direct and profitable marketing facilities.

The care of our soldiers has been a traditional policy with our State throughout its entire history. No free people can afford to be ungrateful to their defenders. In a large sense the problem of caring for the wounded and disabled is one for the national government. Pennsylvania, however, has of her own initiative, always made generous provision for the care and treatment of the wounded and disabled and the support and education of the dependent families of those of her sons who have fallen in battle. I favor a just and generous recognition of the valiant service rendered by our World War Veterans in preserving liberty and civilization to us and the world.

We cannot fail to take note of the approaching Sesqui-centennial Celebration of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. This will be an event of national importance, but of peculiar interest to Pennsylvanians. It is appropriate that the celebration should be held at Philadelphia, where the Declaration was given to the world. Already the Mayor of that great city and many of its patriotic citizens have started a movement to prepare a celebration worthy of the event which gave us national existence. The State should, and doubtless will, contribute its full share toward making the Sesqui-centennial a memorable occasion worthy of our best traditions and measuring up to the highest standards of our patriotic endeavors.

Reference might well be made to other questions and matters of public interest. I have sought to touch only the high spots. Our State government has been the growth of progressive statesmanship through many years. Its functions are many and useful. It operates in every field of activity. There are great departments rendering invaluable service to which I have not specifically referred because their usefulness and value have not been called into question. The State is on constant guard to protect the life and health of its citizens, to preserve the purity of its waters, to conserve its wild life and natural resources, to regulate and control all forms of public service and to serve its people in many other respects, the mere mention of which time forbids. It shall be my purpose if called to the head of the State to see that every activity and agency is maintained on that high level of service and efficiency which will justify its utility and necessity.

In the light of a call to public duty private considerations fade. One cannot give the full measure of service required by the public employment without making private sacrifice. I am fully aware that my election as Governor of the Commonwealth will demand that I strip myself of every association and connection which will in any way interfere with the devotion of my full time and energy to the duties of the office. If successful in the contest I shall retire from all professional and business pursuits in order that I may devote my full time to the administration of the office. I am happy to be able to say to you that I am free from all pledges and factional entanglements. I shall welcome support from all sources and in return shall endeavor to serve all equally and faithfully. If called to the head of the Republican ticket I shall use all the powers and prestige which that position will give to reconcile and unify the party in order that it maintain its proud position of leadership. To sum up all in a single sentence, whatever of time, whatever of training and experience, whatever of ability I may possess will be dedicated solely and exclusively to the whole people of the Commonwealth.

"Amy Hawkes—Amy Hawkes—Amy Hawkes—come into court!" Ward intoned. "Drunk and disorderly!"

"Here, here, here!" Richard said. "What's all this?"

Amy and Nina, with hysterical shrieks, immediately forsook cover, and dashed down to him, clinging to him wildly.

"Oh, Father! Make them stop! Oh, Mr. Carter, save us!" screamed the girls in delicious terror. "Oh, they got poor Francesca—she's locked up in your room! They climbed up our porch, after they swore to Harriet that they wouldn't make another sound!"

Harriet now appeared in the hallway, her hair falling in a braid over her shoulder, and the long lines of the black robe she wore giving her figure an unusual effect of height. She did not see Richard immediately, for she had eyes only for Ward, as she caught his shoulder, and took away the stilet.

"Now, Ward—look here," she said, sternly. "What sort of honor do you call this! Half an hour ago I thought all this nonsense was stopped. Shame on you! Those girls promised me—"

She saw Richard, and laughed, at color flooding her face.

"Aren't they simply shameless!" she said. "I had them all settled down, once! Nina, where's Francesca? You see," Harriet said, in rapid explanation to Richard, "I gave the girls my room tonight, so that they could all be together, and this is my reward!"

The girls, entirely unalarmed by her severity, had deserted Richard now, and were clinging to her, with weak laughter and feeble explanations.

"Francesca unlocked that door, and rushed into Mr. Carter's room!" Amy explained, wiping her eyes. "And then the boys locked her in there!"

The composed reappearance of Francesca at this point, however, added to the general hilarity.

"You did not lock me in, Smarties!" Francesca drawled, childishly. "They climbed to the balcony, and we were—well, we were undressing," she said to Richard, "and here they were hammering, and yelling like—like Si-washes! We grabbed our wrappers, we wanted to—"

"We wanted to lock them out there!" Amy explained, laughing uncontrollably. "But—"

"And I snapped off the light!" Nina interposed, with deep satisfaction.

"And, mind you—"

"And, Father—"

"And the wonder was that we didn't die of fright!"

"Now, look here," Harriet said, in the babel, "I'll give you all exactly two minutes to quiet down. Never in the course of my life—"

Richard thought her maternal indulgence delightful; he thought the young people who clung about her charming in their apologetic and laughing promises. Ward and Bruce Hopper mounted to their own room; Richard went with the girls and Harriet to the rooms that had been attacked. Pilgrim, the tireless, was already there, replacing pillows, straightening beds, untwisting curtains. The girls, with reminiscent bubbles of laughter, began to help her.

After the last good-nights, Richard and Harriet had no choice but to cross the hall again, and they stood there for a moment, laughing at the recent excitement.

"After twelve," Harriet said, with a smiling shake of her head. "Aren't they young demons! However," she added in an undertone, "it's the best thing to the world for Nina! This sort of nonsense will blow cobwebs away!"

Richard was only conscious of a desire to prolong this intimate little moment of parental consultation.

light toward the rioting youngsters in the hall. She got back into her bed and opened her book. But for a long time she neither slept nor read; her eyes widened at the faintest sound of the summer night; her heart thumped madly when the curtains whispered at the window, or the wicker chairs gave the faintest creak. It had not been only for Richard that the midnight hour of responsibility and informality shared had had its thrill.

One o'clock, Harriet closed her book and snapped off her light. But first she went to the window and leaned out into the sweet darkness. There was shadow unbroken everywhere; no light in all the big house was burning as late as her own.

CHAPTER XVI.

After that life took on a mysterious fragrance and beauty that made every hour of it an intoxication to the master and mistress of Crownlands. The fact that their secret was all their own was all the more enchanting. To the domestic staff, to the children, to the outside world, life went upon its usual smooth way. Mr. Carter would be in town tonight, Mrs. Carter was chaperoning the young people, there were flowers for Mrs. Carter. That was all Hot-tomley and Pilgrim and Ward and Nina saw.

But to Harriet and Richard the delicious secret game of hide-and-go-seek made everything else in the world insignificant. Harriet opened the boxes of flowers he sent her, with a heart suffocating with joy. Richard consented to be absent from the dinner table over which she presided with an agony of renunciation that almost made him feel ill. When he chanced one day to meet her with Nina, in a breezy, awninged summer restaurant, the sight of the slender figure thrilled him as he had never been thrilled by any woman he had ever known. He was to speak to her, to hear her voice! One day he bought her shoes; in the shop she looked at him for approval. He thought the shoes, low shoes with buckles, that showed the silk-clad ankle, very suitable and pretty. He was thrown into sudden confusion when the shoe clerk turned to him with a murmured mention of the price.

Ten dollars? Richard fumbled for his purse. He had met her walking alone in the Avenue; she had said that she must get shoes. Hundreds of other men were presumably buying their wives shoes, up and down the brilliant street. But Richard found the adventure shaking to the soul.

"They're lovely shoes," Harriet said, as they walked out into the sunshine. She told him that she was to meet Nina at his mother's at five. Richard, with sudden eagerness, wondered if she would spend the interval in having tea somewhere, but instead they went into a bookshop, and she carried a new book triumphantly away. "It's a frightful day in town," Harriet said, "and if we're a little early we may all get away to the country that much sooner!"

She established herself contentedly beside him when they did finally start for Crownlands. And sometimes he glanced sidewise at her, her beautiful hair rippling in thick waves under the thin veil, her face a little pale from the heat of the day, her glorious eyes faintly shadowed. When the swift movement of the car brought her shoulder against his, their eyes met for a smiling second, and it seemed to Richard that his heart brimmed with the most delicious emotion that he had ever known.

Nina complained of a headache when they reached home, and went early to bed. Harriet, when she had tubbed and changed to an evening gown, glanced in at Nina, and thought the girl asleep. There were men guests for dinner, and afterward there was bridge. Harriet sat with Madame Carter for awhile, for the old lady had also dined upstairs, went about the house upon her usual errands, and, going to her own room, found Nina reading, at about ten o'clock. Nina did not look up or speak as Harriet came in.

The door that led to Richard's room was not only unlocked, but actually ajar. Harriet gave it a surprised glance, and spoke to Nina, in the next room.

"Nina, did you unlock this door?"

"What door?" Nina called. "Oh, yes!" she added. "I did."

"Oh," Harriet murmured. And she stepped to the door, and looked into Richard's room.

It was a sort of upstairs sitting room, furnished simply, in rian fashion, with deep leather chairs on each side of the fireplace, broad tables carrying only the essential lamps and ashtrays, a shabby desk where Richard kept personal papers, and bookshelves crammed with novels. Harriet, making a timid round, saw Balzac and Dickens, Dumas and Fielding, several Shakespeares and a complete Meredith, jostling elbows with modern novels in bright jackets, and yellow French romances losing their paper covers.

Suddenly her heart turned to water; some tiny sound in the silence warning her that some one had entered. She turned, discovered here in the very center of his own private apartment. He was standing not three feet away from her, or a second they stared at each other, with a sort of trepidation.

Harriet, I want you to tell me the truth!"

Harriet, turning, faced her between two curtains of rippling gold. She saw a new Nina, a subdued, thoughtful, serious woman in the old confident Nina's place.

"But first I ought to tell you that I wasn't with Amy today!" Nina said. "Oh, Nina! Must we begin that sort of thing?" Harriet reproached her. But she was puzzled by Nina's manner. "Back to school-girl tricks!" she

He stepped to the dressing room, and peered in a pocket, without moving his pleasant look from her. "Giving my room the once over!" he said.

"Nina left the door open. I've never been in here before," Harriet said, trying to make her voice as natural as his own. Confused and ashamed, she was hardly conscious of what she said, as "Here we are!" Richard glanced at the paper he had found. "See here," he said, presently, going to a window, "come here a minute, I want to show you this! You see," they were both looking out into the moonlight now, "you see, this is where I propose to build on that big room downstairs, throw the library into the blue room, and have a big sleeping porch upstairs here," he explained. "Perfectly feasible, and yet it will make a different house of it!"

"Giving My Room the Once Over!" He Said.

Harriet commented interestedly enough. But she heard his voice rather than his words, and saw only the well-groomed, black-clad figure, the shining patent-leather shoes, the fine hand that indicated the changes.

Perhaps he was conscious of confusion, too, for his words stopped, and presently they were looking at each other in a strange silence, Richard still smiling, Harriet wide-eyed.

Then suddenly his strong arms held her close, and her blue, frightened eyes were close to his, and she felt everything else in the world slip away from her except the exquisite knowledge that she loved this man with all her heart and soul.

"I want to tell you something," Richard said, quickly and incoherently. "I want you to know that I love you—I think I've always loved you! This wasn't in our bond, I know, but I think I couldn't have wanted you so without loving you! If—if the time comes, Harriet, when you can care for me, you'll tell me, won't you? That's all I want, just to know that you will tell me. You're going to tell me, yourself! I'm going to make you love me! I'll be patient—I'll not hurry you—but some day you'll have to tell me that I've—I've won you!"

He had spoken swiftly, almost sternly, with a sort of desperate determination. Now he freed her arms as suddenly as he had grasped them, and added, in a lower tone:

"Until that time I'll not—not even—kiss the top of your hair, Harriet," he said.

In the mad rushing of her senses she could not find the right word, but she detained him with an entreating hand. Her eyes, shining with a look that he had never seen there before, were fixed on his. But Richard did not look at her eyes, he looked down at the hand she had laid on his own.

"I don't think," Harriet said, breathlessly, "that I can ever like you any more than I do!"

She had meant it for surrender; her heart was beating wildly with the glorious shame of a proud woman who gives herself. But Richard was not looking at the betraying eyes. In the great new love that had swept him from all his old moorings there was a deep humility. He only heard her say that she could never learn to love him. He bent his head over her finger tips, and kissed them, as he said quietly:

"But I'm going to try to make you, just the same!"

Then he was gone, and Harriet was standing alone in the softly lighted room. For a few moments she remained perfectly still, with her white hands pressed to her burning cheeks. Then, shaken with joy and surprise, with a delicious terror and something of a child's innocent chagrin, she went noiselessly back to her own room, closed the communicating door, and undressed with pauses for the dreams that would come creeping over body and soul, and hold her in their exquisite stillness for long minutes together.

She was brushing her hair when Nina suddenly appeared, and came lifelessly in to sit on the edge of Harriet's bed.

"I want to ask you something!" Nina said, in an odd voice. "And, Harriet, I want you to tell me the truth!"

Harriet, turning, faced her between two curtains of rippling gold. She saw a new Nina, a subdued, thoughtful, serious woman in the old confident Nina's place.

"But first I ought to tell you that I wasn't with Amy today!" Nina said. "Oh, Nina! Must we begin that sort of thing?" Harriet reproached her. But she was puzzled by Nina's manner. "Back to school-girl tricks!" she

PRICE UNDER PRE-WAR FIGURE, SAYS LOCAL AUTO MAN

Considering the large number of important improvements that have been made, the latest sharp reductions in the prices of Dodge Brothers Motor Car actually bring them down below the pre-war level according to L. H. Rapsey, the local dealer. To substantiate his contention he pointed first to the car, and then to three closely typewritten pages on which some of those improvements were listed.

"The automotive industry deserves a lot of credit for the way it is going after the price question," said Mr. Rapsey. "I am not referring to Dodge Bros. alone even though I believe they have done more than their share, but to the industry as a whole. If manufacturers and retailers in all other lines had taken a similar attitude the public would have been disabused of the profiteering idea long ago and buying would have been back on a normal basis much sooner. I know the public appreciates this, from the way automobiles are selling."

"I ran across an editorial the other day which expressed my opinion exactly. It was in the Denver Times. I am quite sure that you readers will agree with what it says."

Following is the portion of the editorial to which Mr. Rapsey referred: "The automobile industry has adopted heroic methods of restoring business and has cut prices until they are little short of irresistible. In justice to one of the half dozen leading industries of the nation it should receive credit for this policy. In many instances it is said to have brought the cost of the 1922 car down to the price level of 1914, which is more than can be said for the vast majority of industries."

"The fact is particularly upsetting to the average man already owning a car because, every chop in the price of a new model of the make he drives means a straight, proportionate, inescapable reduction in the value of his used car. And there, naturally, is the rub. It is a strange thing that the car owner is willing for the factories to cut the daylight out of its price schedule, but still cherishes an idea that the value of the car he owns is unaffected when he wants to dispose of it or trade it in. Another instance of 'Let George do it'."

"We believe the retail automobile business would be greatly speeded up if the car-owning public, which talks about the high cost of living and the 'profiteering' of merchants, would disabuse its mind of its unwarranted notions regarding the value of used cars, accept its loss, trade in the old busses at their actual value today and start with a clean slate and not even a regret for the past. There is no known method of sustaining the prices of used cars while the prices of new ones are being slashed and the sooner the car owner realizes it the quicker business will pick up."

FLASHLIGHT FOILS ROBBERS

Saves Choir Scraps

Erie, Pa., March 11 (United Press)—Captain Jack Welsh recommends the use of the flashlight in warding off hold-up men.

"Flashed into the eyes of a bandit the light, if sufficiently strong, not only blinds him, but throws him off his guard. Then soak him a good one on the head with it."

He particularly urges women to carry them, to thwart bold purse snatchers.

BEWARE OF BATTERY REVIVERS, WARNING BY VESTA DEALER

"In the old days, gasoline economizers were quite in style with the get-rich-quick promoters," said E. R. Williams of the local Vesta Battery Service Station the other day. "They were much more common than they are now. One could buy them in powder tablet or liquid form and administer them in homeopathic or allopathic doses as he pleases—the effect was the same."

"As long as the car owner was very careful to have the carbon removed from the engine cylinders, the valves ground and the carburetor adjusted and then apply the so-called economizer to the fuel tank, he was certain to get greater mileage from said."

"Never back to a school-girl," Nina said, passionately. "I'll never be that again. Harriet," she went on, "I've written Royal three times, since my birthday, and I've seen him twice."

"You saw him today?" Harriet ventured.

"I went there this afternoon," Nina each gallon of gasoline, and no wonder.

"The same thing applies to the present day storage battery 'rejuvenators,' recharging solutions, and what not, that are being sold as mysterious compounds and wonderful discoveries which recharge your storage battery in twenty minutes. Any battery service station can do the same thing by doping a battery with strong acid—but battery experts know the harmful effects of such treatment."

"The surprising thing is the willingness of many people to pay $3 to $5 for a single application of these dopes when most storage battery service station would do the same thing for 25 cents."

"There is nothing mysterious about pouring strong acid solution into a discharged battery and having it operate in twenty or thirty minutes afterward, any service station can do that, but the normal way to recharge a battery is to put a current of electricity through it and avoid injuring it or shortening its life. The quick way is to pay $3 to $5 for about 25 cents worth of strong acid—and then suffer the consequences."

Why They Wear Out

Every battery has two kinds of wear—the natural slow wear due to use, and the more rapid wear that comes from abuse.

Keep the proper amount of water in your battery by putting in a little every two weeks. Test with the hydrometer to make sure there's enough charge. Come in to Battery Headquarters at the first faint sign of trouble.

Then your battery will wear out slowly and gradually, giving you uninterrupted service at lowest cost per month and per mile.

break them. We have loaded our law books with statutes and then contentedly winked at their violation. Every law, once enacted, should be impartially enforced. The prohibitory laws form no exception to this rule. The illicit manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors has reached alarming proportions and has become a menace to the life and health of the victims of the traffic. Lawlessness of this form must be suppressed, not only because of our respect for law, but for the protection of those who fall an easy prey to their appetites. PAY AS YOU LEAVE IF YOU LIKE IT

The proprietor of the moving picture theatre at Bend, Oregon, has inaugurated a new method of collecting money for the privilege of witnessing the performances in his theatre. There is no charge made to enter the theatre and no stipulated amount is charged to leave the auditorium, but at the exit a box is placed with a notice that patrons may contribute whatever they feel the performance was worth. In this way it is possible for some who cannot afford to pay for admission to witness the performances free of charge while the more fortunate sometimes pay more than the ordinary rate. The instigator of this new plan claims that it not only works but actually shows an improvement over the old method.

Resolved, that in her death we have lost a loving and true sister and her vacant place reminds us that the Reaper death, has claimed his own.

Resolved, that while we mourn and regret our loss we bow in humble submission to the will of Almighty God, who ruleth and doeth all things well.

Resolved, that our Charter be draped in mourning for thirty days and that these resolutions be spread upon minutes and a copy be sent to the bereaved family and the same to be published in the town paper.

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

LESSON FOR MARCH 12

AMOS WARNS ISRAEL (TEMPERANCE LESSON)

LESSON TEXT—Amos 4:1-8. GOLDEN TEXT—Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.—Prov. 31:1. REVEREND MATTHEW—Luce and 12, 23, 25; 25:1-13; Hymns 411; Gal. 5:1-21. PRIMARY TOPIC—God Sends Amos on his Errand.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Prophet Who Was a Friend to the Poor. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Consequences of Self-Indulgence. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Social Evils Yet to Be Conquered.

The Kingdom of Israel reached a high state of prosperity in the time of Jeroboam II, and with it came a condition of luxury, corruption and wickedness.

The judgment of this lesson is directed against the sins of the upper classes in Samaria. The same sins are practiced in America, in the nation and in the church. With the increase of wealth in America has come luxury, corruption and gross wickedness which staggers the imagination. It behooves all to give a listening ear, for God will eventually enter into judgment. Our lesson is a temperance lesson. Temperance applies to other things than indulgence in intoxicating liquor. Our age is intoxicated with pleasure, pursuit of gain and selfish ambition.

1. Reckless Secrecy (vv. 1-3). They were blind to the perils that surrounded them. They were living in a fool's paradise, closing their eyes to the approaching storm of judgment as predicted by Amos. They trusted in the mountains of Samaria for their protection. They regarded their city as impregnable. They no doubt regarded the utterance of Amos as impracticable—the dreams of a fanatic.

The tragic thing about this blindness on the part of the chief ones of the nation was that they were so puffed up with pride that they failed to read the signs of the times in the light of history (v. 2). The cities of Calneh and Hamath, though great and mighty, had fallen. To disregard the lessons of history, to dismiss the thought of impending judgment, is to bring near the "seat of violence" (v. 3). Let chaotic Europe and Russia be the red lights of warning to America, and let all injustice and class selfishness be laid aside.

2. Luxury (vv. 4-6). The luxury of these upper classes in Samaria expressed itself in 1. Extravagant furniture (v. 4). They had beds of ivory—perhaps wood inlaid with ivory. Costly as their furniture was in that day, it was commonplace as compared to some of the expensive furniture and fittings in our great cities.

2. Laziness (v. 4). They stretched themselves upon their couches—lived lives of indolence. Such is the way of many still.

3. Fastidious delicacies (v. 4). The implication here is that they had their dainties out of season. This is what many of the rich pride themselves in.

4. Adorn their feasts with music (v. 5). They sang idle songs—even invented musical instruments for this purpose. They constituted the noble art of music to their sensual feasts.

5. They drank wine (v. 6). They were not content with ordinary drinking vessels. They drank from howls, indicating excessive drinking. They were so mastered by the intoxicating cup that their feasts which were adorned with the refinements of music ended in drunkenness.

III. Failure to Grieve for Joseph (v. 6). Joseph here stands for Ephraim and Manasse, his two sons. Ephraim became the principal tribe of the northern kingdom, so Joseph is used as a synonym for the nation. The upper classes were indulging in these effeminate luxuries, entirely indifferent to the groanings of the masses. And whenever such a condition exist in a nation there is need of Amos to thunder God's judgment upon those who are guilty of it.

IV. The Inevitable Issue (vv. 7, 8). 1. They shall go into captivity (v. 7). The northern nation was first in sin, therefore first to go into captivity. What a striking contrast this picture! Instead of lying on ivory couches feasting upon dainties, they are with the suffering exiles.

2. The certainty of the issue (v. 8). It is inevitable because of God's nature. He is a God of justice. He has sworn that judgment shall fall. He is the God of hosts—the controller of the whole universe, therefore none can escape. God hates the wickedness of the world and He will bring into judgment the men and women who revel in luxury with no concern for the poor and needy. Though God waits long, He does not forget. The only escape for America is penitence.

Abide in Him. And now, little children, abide in Him; that when He shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed at His coming.—1 John 2:28.

Great Mischiefs. Great mischiefs happen more often from folly, meanness, and vanity, than from the greater sins of avarice and ambition.—Burke.

Chance to Be Saved. Don't despair of a student if he has one clear idea.—Emmons.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

A story has been going the rounds of Clearfield county the past few weeks to the effect that women voters would not have to pay taxes in order to qualify them for voting purposes. The statement to this effect was attributed to a county official and upon receipt of several requests to verify that alleged view of the law The Progress took the matter up with County Solicitor Woodward this morning and asked him to tell us just what the law provides in this regard.

The County Solicitor said that so far as liability for taxes was concerned the female voter was under the same obligation to pay as the male voter, with the exception that in the case of the female voter the Tax Collector is powerless to force the collection of the taxes assessed if the woman is without property. The present law empowers the Tax Collector to seize the body of the male voter or taxpayer and slap him in jail if he doesn't pay his taxes, but there is no law on the Pennsylvania Statute books at present which permits the Tax Collector to be so rude with the female taxpayer. Hence, every woman who desires to vote must qualify for the exercise of her right of suffrage the same as the male voter, but if she does not vote and owes not see fit to pay the personal taxes assessed against her, she doesn't have to, as there is no law compelling her to do so. So the whole thing for the non-property owning women, under present legislation, is bound up in the proposition of vote or no vote. If she wants to vote, she must pay her taxes, if she doesn't vote the Tax Collector must keep his hands off her.

Yes, it's Lent and we know all about it but—Little Bill needs that brace and to help Little Bill get that brace, they are going to have a card party again in the Dimeling next Tuesday evening.

When they had the last one a short time ago, there was a good attendance but there was about half the price of the brace realized after the bills were paid. Now, no matter what church you belong to—you may be observing Lent to its fullest intent and meaning but in this case—one of those sweet charity cases where even the Master would have broken a rule—we want you to lend your support toward getting this brace for Little Bill so that he may run and hop and skip just as your little kiddie does.

In case you do not wish to attend the party, you may send your money by some friend who you know is going to attend.

That bunch over at the West Side church are sure a live bunch when it comes to putting anything across. They're working for a new church building over there and the Sunday School orchestra booked David Wark Griffith's greatest motion picture spectacle, "The Fall of Babylon" to appear at the Driggs Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

Not content with just a mere showing of the picture, Prof. Shaeffer, who directs the Sunday School orchestra sent out a call for the city's best instrumentalists and they will work out the regular musical score that comes with the scenario. They go further, however. They have also secured the services of Mrs. Corneha Parkhill Reeve, one of the city's leading vocalists and the Keystone Quartette, composed of four of the best men's voices in Clearfield to render selections during the evening.

This assures everyone who wishes to see and hear one of the best feasts for eye and ear that the season has thus far produced a full evening of enjoyment.

Tickets are now on sale for "The Fall of Babylon" and these tickets must be exchanged at the Driggs Theatre box office before the performance starts. The box office will be open Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday for this purpose.

Mr. W. M. Hoover, who has been at the Clearfield Trust Co. during the past week will remain over Monday and Tuesday of next week to assist persons who have delayed making their income tax returns and receive first payment on same.

MRS. EMMA V. ADAMS

Mrs. Emma V. Adams died at the home of her son Fred R. Adams, 1214 Dorey St., from a complication of diseases, resulting from a recent stroke.

Mrs. Adams was in her 74th year. She is survived by three children: Frank and Edna, of Duquesne, Pa., and Fred of Clearfield, and one brother, H. P. Hartman, of Pittsburgh. The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon from the residence in the old cemetery.

Mrs. W. A. Mohney and daughter, Helen, returned home from Reynoldsville after attending the funeral of Mr. Mohney's nephew, William Zimmerman.

STOP DOSING, DRINK MILK

Stop dosing your stomach with drugs of all sorts in your endeavor to put your system up where it ought to be. Your stomach will be better off and your general health will undergo a wonderful change if you'll start drinking milk with your meals and in between.

From the very first you'll begin to feel that your pep is returning and you'll soon be drinking more milk than you thought you could. There's so much food value in our milk that it's no wonder that steady drinkers soon take on a lot of solid flesh and commence to feel a lot better.

CAMDEN HAS A "TAYLOR" MYSTERY

Camden, N. J., March 11—Under mysterious circumstances recalling the murder of William D. Taylor, John T. Brenan, a theatrical promoter and friend of the Los Angeles director, was slain here last night. Three men were seen to drive up to his home and later he was found dead. A charge of buckshot had been fired into the back of his neck, evidently from a sawed-off shot gun.

How a man who did not believe in true love and thought every woman had her price, found out the error of his views.

A story of how true love finally won out against suspicion and unusual temptation.

The tale of a love that stood the acid test of temptation.

How a passion for luxury led one woman into the midst of misery and torment, and how true love brought her through in safety.

"And It Cannot Warp"

Being a uniform sheet of pure gypsum rock, Sheetrock takes any decorative treatment. It can be papered, painted or paneled. Or, it can be left in its own finish of soft mist gray.

Here, indeed, is what you, as a home owner, have always wanted—walls and ceilings that STAY PUT, year after year, regardless of climatic conditions.

Then too, Sheetrock is fireproof; it protects the building. An insulator of heat, Sheetrock makes the building cool in summer, warm in winter, and cuts fuel bills.

You will also be glad to know that the cost of Sheetrock—for new construction, alterations and repairs—is actually less than that of frail, unsatisfactory wall boards. We suggest that you call on us today and see for yourself what a wonderful material this standard wall and ceiling unit really is.
